TO: HENRY KISSINGER

FROM: AL HAIG

The President asked about your response to his desire for private sessions with Mao and Chou and I gave him the essence of your discussions with Chou on the subject. The President asked that I wire you immediately and confirm that he was most comfortable with a meeting with both Mao and Chou together but insisted that the session include him only on the U.S. side. Haldeman informs me that if a meeting of this type is held simultaneously with both leaders then there is no requirement for a separate private session between the President and Chou-En-lai. He agrees with me, however, that since you have already requested such a meeting that he will leave this issue to your judgment in light of your assessment of conditions there.

The President stated that if "anyone else" were present this would differ from the style he has established in his trips abroad and, more importantly, would raise the "Rogers problem." There may be more to this than that simple explanation and I suspect the Sherman story in Sunday's Post which touched upon the genesis of the Peking and Soviet initiatives was not helpful in any sense. You will recall that Sherman suggested that both trips had long been part of "your" conceptual agenda.

I hope to speak to the President this morning about the Middle
